

Opportunities for discussion and debate

Based on "For the Love of Kin"

This story dares to glimpse into a future that seems utterly inconceivable to us today. Readers are invited to jump forward two decades and imagine a post-industrial, post-violence world where

- violence is no longer normalized
- the word 'animal' is a relic of history
- the reframing of animals as Kin is not just a linguistic shift but represents a new moral framework that is grounded in equality, empathy, and responsibility
- where a lowly sheep called Pecorino is memorialised for his role in human progress

INVITE the learners to explore the internet for the current situation regarding cultivated meat, to discover whether it has a chance of revolutionising our future as posed by this story.
